Our wedding day started just like everybody else's does. Everyone was busy getting ready for the big day. My husband to be Tom and I were being married at my parents home. Everything was perfect, the house, the flowers, and the bridesmaids. At two o'clock we were pronounced Husband and wife. After all the pictures, we had a dinner and reception. As the evening wore down we decided it was time to leave for our wedding night. The first thing that went wrong that was probably to be an omen, was while everyone was eating and drinking some of the men thought it would be extremely funny to park up the back of our car, so when we went to leave the car wouldn't move. So to avoid any further delay we took my parents car. Finally I thought we were going to start our new married life together. So we proceed to go to the motel. After a half hour drive we were at the motel. By this time the anticipation and nervousness had set in. As we neared the room my husband takes the Key to our room out of his pocket and puts it in the lock on the door, then he picks me up to carry me in the room. Well much to our surprise when the door opened up there was another couple in our room. As we stood there in wedding attire and all the manager came rushing in to tell us they had to switch us to another room, but couldn't reach us. They were hoping to catch us as we got to the motel but had missed us until it was too late. After many apologies to everyone we were escorted to the right room for the start of our new life together. We still to this day laugh about the crazy first night of our life together. We now have been married for 16 years and hope for many more together.
